PRESS RELEASE

Mobilegov to equip a second major public administration

January 2009 - Mobilegov, the software security editor whose solutions exploit its patented Digital DNA® technology, is to equip a second major public administration

After the NHS (British National Health Service), the Austrian Chancellery has chosen Mobilegov.

The contract concerns the integration of SAWS, the strong authentication product without dedicated tokens of Mobilegov, by its Austrian partner METADAT. It will help fight identity theft and impersonation of the 70.000 employees of the 17 Austrian public administrations, thus contributing to guarantee that only those with the need to know access critical data.

SAWS was selected for its ease of implementation, configuration and use. Indeed, SAWS is the only strong authentication solution which does not require the distribution of specific hardware tokens to the users. Thus, logistics is simplified, which constitutes a significant advantage in the case of users belonging to different organizations. SAWS, which operates also in SaaS mode, is integrated easily in heterogeneous systems and applications. Lastly, the enrolment of a user takes only a few minutes, which guarantees a minimum downtime in the access to data and applications.

A user may be authenticated whatever his equipment: PC, laptop, mobile phone. The user may use his own equipment or shared equipment.

For confidentiality reasons, the amount of the contract and the architecture of the solution will not be disclosed. However, the two companies declare that the integration of the strong authentication of Mobilegov with the role- and content-based access control of Metadat represent a strong potential of further deployment.
